A Norway Newspaper of 1833

(By A. E. Verrill.)

Having recently seen, in the possession of C. M. Smith, a copy of "The Politician," Vol. I, No. 38, dated March 12, 1833, it seemed worthy of notice. It was a Whig weekly published every Tuesday, by Wm. E. Goodnow. Editor was Wm. A. Evans. Terms $2.00 per year. This copy, probably entire, has but four pages. It is devoted largely to politics.

A long space, letter from Senator Peleg Sprague, dated Washington, D. C., occupied five and a half columns. It was directed to the Legislature of Maine, and is a vindication of himself, when invited to resign from the Senate of the United States.

Politics were hot at that time, for the abolition of the U. S. Bank and a Revision of the Tariff were being considered, and also the Northeastern Boundary dispute.

There is a poem on "Death," by W. O. B. Peabody. The Proceedings of the State Legislature, just held, had just adjourned, are given in detail. There is a notice of the appointment of Timothy J. Carter, of Paris, as County Attorney, in place of Levi Whitman, of Norway.

The longest story is about the Indians and their mode of disguising themselves as hogs by using hog skins, during the Indian and French wars. An item of interest, taken from another paper, recounts the recent attack by a large black wolf on a hunter, Mr. Benj. Smith, of Madison, Maine, who had put out bait for foxes and attracted the wolf. His dog wounded the wolf; the man thinking him dead approached and the wolf sprang upon him, biting his legs, which were protected by thick boots, so that he was only slightly hurt. He killed the wolf with his pocket knife. It measured "nearly five feet from snout to tail." At that time, and long afterwards, wolves were rare in the settled parts of Maine.

There are, as in modern papers, long advertisements of patent medicines, etc. Asa Barton of Norway has several advertisements of books, etc., mentioning some recently published books by name; such as "Peter Parley's Tales;" Cooper's novels; school books by H. L. Barnum, etc. Other Norway men who advertised are Joel Parkhurst, W. E. Goodnow, H. W. Millett (sheriff sale), Solomon and Asa Millett (dissolution of partnership). Under "Absconded," Arden Tubbs of Hebron, advertises a runaway "indented apprentice."

DEVELOP MAINE MOVEMENT.

Geo. L. Sanborn of Norway, recently elected Register of Deeds for the Western District, has accepted the position of supervisor in charge of the affairs of the Develop Maine Movement in Oxford County. Mr. Sanborn took up this additional work after a thorough investigation of the movement and now proposes to conduct a vigorous campaign to interest the people of the County in this effort to bring new industries, new capital and additional farmers into Maine.

Mr. Sanborn is particularly fitted for this work as he is young, alert, industrious and stands well throughout the whole county. His education was obtained in Norway, where he attended the high school, from which he graduated in the class of 1904. He then entered the shoe factory as an operative and worked as a cutter and in the office. Later he worked in Auburn and in Portland. About a year ago he became financially interested in the Victoria Chemical Works and is doing the same here.

The Develop Maine Movement is becoming affiliated with just such bright young men in all parts of the State, and is perfecting an organization which will eventually be the most effective of its kind in the country. In every case the prospective candidate for the position of county supervisor has been investigated thoroughly before he has been offered the position. The candidate has then been given the opportunity to satisfy himself of the merit of the Movement.

Oxford County contains as much or more mineral wealth, more farm opportunities, better timber, more water power, better manufacturing sites than any other county in Maine. It can offer the prospective farm buyer, manufacturer or investor, more than any other territory of equal size on earth. If the people of the county will join forces to make these facts known to the people of the world, Oxford county will experience a business boom that will make the West turn green with envy.

Mr. Sanborn will appoint men and women to endeavor to secure additional members at once. He is authorized to pay them liberal commission and will, himself, be pleased to receive applications. The membership fee is only $1 and every man and woman in Oxford county should join.

Queer Traits of Animals.

Many animals and insects have curious ways of doing things for which there is no apparent scientific reason. A fly on the window pane will crawl to the top, fly back to the bottom and crawl back again. This order is seldom reversed—why, no one knows. It is on record that a fly crawled up a window pane 32 times, returning each time to the same place.

Hens scratch for food with the sun behind them, the reason being that the rays reflect on the minute particles. A blind hen will pick grain and not miss a kernel. Cats seldom lie with their feet to the fire. Usually they lie on the left side. Dogs lie with their fore paws to the fire.

A mouse will ignore a food supply sufficient for a week and go to great risks to nibble at wholesome supply. It will hide at the source of food supply and not depart from it until actually disturbed. It isn't true that a mouse runs to its hole at the first alarm.

Making of Jellies.

The favorite "jells" with the old time housekeepers were currant and blackberry and she made much harder work of their preparation than we do now. Jelly can be made with little trouble from nearly every kind of fruit and berries although some are preferred to others because of the delicacy of flavor or good color. By making a few tumblerfuls of all kinds the close of the season will find one with a choice stock of jellies for winter use.

Current, barberry, crab apple and green grape jellies are used with meats; rhubarb, peach and the grape for layer cakes; raspberry, quince, strawberries and apple for combination in fancy desserts; while blackberry and black currant jellies are useful in sickness. The utensils needed are a granite or porcelain kettle with inside surface unbroken, an earthen bowl, a silver or wooden spoon, a flannel bag and another of double cheese cloth, and a tin plate. Use half pint tumblers with covers for most jellies, although apple or grape may sometimes be put into pint jars.

A physician recently remarked that "it was an awful punishment to be only slightly ill and have nothing to do." The man who is only halfway sick, if he has nothing to occupy his attention, soon grows morbidly introspective, and his mind becomes filled with exaggerated ideas of his condition. Disease grows and flourishes under such conditions. Regular employment is conducive to health. Work keeps the blood active and the mind away from the physical condition.

Mount Washington.

Mount Washington is the nation's property at last. At all events the government and the owners, after all two years of negotiating, have now agreed upon the purchase price, the foresters are satisfied with the terms, and it is altogether probable that the forest reservation commission will at once authorize the transaction.
This is by all odds the most important purchase that the government has made in connection with the White Mountain national forest establishment, both from a sentimental and from an economic standpoint. Sentimentally it is the grandest part of the mountain country, and the Mecca of all tourists to the region, whether they journey afoot, by train or by automobile. Economically, also, it is of great consequence, for here there are still standing some very considerable bodies of original forest, and three New England rivers of size, the Saco, the Androscoggin and the Connecticut all draw important tributaries from this mountain head.

Already the government owns some of the summit of the "Presidential" range, Madison and Adams and their northern slopes. This latest purchase includes all of the great central peak, Mount Washington, together with its flanks and spurs, and six other Presidential peaks as well, Clay, Jackson and Adams of the northern group, with Monroe, Franklin and Pleasant in the southern chain. Within this area lies the Great Gulf, that beautiful wild ravine that digs six miles deep into the eastern side of Washington, a glorious wilderness of primeval forest. On the same side, but farther south, are the Huntington and Tuckerman ravines, where in ages past glaciers dwelt.

Nor is that all, for the purchase will include that long southerly ridge, the Katahdin, which is fully six miles long, flows down from Boot Spur, close under the cone of Washington, to the lower end of Crawford Notch at Bartlett. This embraces the knobs known as the Davises, Stairs mountain noted for its gigantic granite treads, Mount Resolution, Mount Crawford, commanding one of the most sublime views of the notch, and Mount Hope.

In all it represents some 35,000 acres, which, added to what the government has already taken on the slopes south of Jefferson and Randolph townships, the Wild river country and in the Pinkham notch, makes an almost solid body of more than 100,000 acres in the northeast quarter of the White Mountain quadrangle.

Until now the government takings have been confined to the northerly and westerly sides of the mountains almost exclusively. But this latest transaction will touch the southern border in the Sandwich range. The same company that owns Mount Washington also holds title to great stretches in the towns of Albany and Bartlett, and the tract now includes these properties. This is all on the Saco river drainage, and within its boundaries lie the Mount mountains, that long north and south ridge which is so important a feature in the landscape from Intervale and Norway, and under which are the White Horse and Cathedral ledges, now New Hampshire state reservations. Mount Atitash on the north, Haystack on the south and Table mountain on the West are all included. Crossing the Swift river, which flows out of the Albany drainage, the Sandwich range rises as the southern escarpment of the White Mountain mass. Here is Mount Chocoma, one of the gems of the White Hills; Mount Pausan, and Mount Passaconaway, with its foothill section Wonalancet. All these fall within the new taking, and perhaps a bit of the southeast slope of Whiteface mountain to boot.

Very little of this southern tract remains unnumbered, but there is a comparatively small area on the south side of Whiteface and Passaconaway, and directly behind the hamlet of Wonalancet, that still bears timber in commercial quantities. In fact, preparations were going actively forward there for the immediate removal of that growth.

All told, then, there will be something like 92,000 acres added to the White Mountain National forest if the purchasing board gives its approval to these trades. Added to what the government already owns, the federal holdings there will then total approximately 100,000 acres out of the 500,000 acres which must eventually be included in order to cover the White Mountain area proper. With these properties in hand the President will then control the bulk of the Presidential range, the eastern side of the Carter Mountain range, including the Wild river wilderness, a goodly portion of the Pinkham notch, the Wildcat, Spruce and Iron mountains in Jackson, a satisfactory piece of the Conway and Sandwich mountains, a goodly area on both sides of the Woodstock valley, at the southern gateway to the Franconia notch, including the Thornton Gore region and the Lost river, with its picturesque caverns, a piece of Moosilauke mountain, the slopes of Mount Garfield, Mount Hale and the Tivins and the Hartmouth range north of Tabyan's. Except for the stretch along the northern frontier from Dartmouth to Wild river on the State of Maine border, there are widely detached areas, and there are gaps in the line even here. There is much yet remaining for the government to do before the White Mountain National forest is completed.

NORTH BUCKFIELD.

Mountain Grange Fair.
Mountain Grange holds its annual cattle show and fair at their hall in North Buckfield, Oct. 2.
Prizes are offered for best made dress, outland made by a young girl; for best cake made by a girl; for corn and vegetables raised by the boys.
There are samples of all kinds of school work on exhibit. The school children entertain in the hall in the afternoon with songs and readings. This is a new feature at this fair—the baby show.
The young people of the grange occupy a tent on the ground and sell ice cream, candy, peanuts and cigars. No fairs are allowed at these fairs.

Caterer Cutting serves beans baked in the beanhole for the baked bean dinner furnished in the lower hall at noon by the grangers. Baked beans, white and brown bread, pickles, salads, cakes, pies and coffee for dinner and supper. Many people come especially to eat of the beans baked in the ground.
The usual horse and oxen pulls, sports and a game of base ball on the grounds. Shaw's orchestra from South Paris furnish music afternoon and evening. An entertainment in the evening, consisting of music by the orchestra, singing by Mildred Shaw of Buckfield, readings by Marion Shaw of Portland. The entertainment is followed by a dance.

Something About New Suits.

Although the tailors have come to no agreement about coat lengths, and the length of the coat is really as yet a matter of taste in the tailoring, there is a tendency to the long coat, and with waistlines lengthening and skirts widening, a new type of coat and military in line, is promised in the fall. The woman of 1914-15 bids fair to incline to sturdiness which will be due to her loose, long waisted coat, joined to a full tunic by a broad belt.

The coat suit, however, is much in evidence in the early autumn displays, and promises to be an important factor in the fall wardrobe. Its skirt is noticeable wide. Some of the new coats are partly capes, and all are elaborately decorated, hence their martially Napoleonic or colonial air. The new suit trimmings are of fine braid, cord buttons, ruffles, and beautiful new effects in beading, while every example of suit plainly evidences the fact that fashion sanctions smart coat dresses for street wear this season.

The early fashion exhibits also show a notably large number of practical fall dresses designed to serve for house or street. Some of these show the new baguette with bustle back. The bolero and tunic are also seen among the autumn models.

Materials are stripped, checked, or figured. Checks and stripes figure largely in the traveling costumes. Instead of the Eastern hues, which have been so prominent in trimmings, neutral tones are combined in the new models. Black and dark blue are the colors of the season.

The new flare at the bottom of the skirt appears in many of the new skirt models, some of the flare skirts having flounces, other plaits which are extremely smart in effect. The circular skirt is one of the extreme styles. The skirt length seems to be shorter.

A characteristic of many stunning costumes is a clever combination of material, while separate blouses and skirts are shown, the new blouses being comfortably loose. Long sleeves are a distinct feature of the blouses, the long and loose fitting. Many of the new tulleures are made very graceful and feminine by sashes of one sort or another.

There seems to be little change in sport garments, and the silk coat holds its own among the autumn models. The Pullover evening dresses, made rather short to allow better opportunity for dancing, are shown, and corsages with very short sleeves necessitating a light full scarf thrown over the blouse are creations receiving quite a note of distinction. The new dancing frocks are also short.

Maine for Maine People.

Maine People are All People Who Live in Maine; Who Make Their Homes in Maine; While They Live in Maine. The attitude of the Maine citizen toward the stranger who wants to start business here is changing, and this is due, in part at least, to the constant hammering of the Develop Maine Movement on the need of boosting instead of knocking. Here is a case in point.

This week two men drew up in front of a typical village store in a settlement that has been noted for some years because of the pessimistic attitude of its inhabitants. As the automobile ceased its humming, the store-keeper came out on the platform to see what he could sell. It developed that the two strangers didn't want anything in his line, but were thinking of starting a small industry in a town some 20 miles away, and were making inquiries about the supply of lumber.

There is plenty of that stuff around here," replied the store-keeper "and if you people really intend to do business there and build up the town, you'll find everybody willing to help you. They'll give you credit and they'll sell you the stuff right."

One of the strangers formerly lived in Maine, but has since been in business in other States. He was so surprised and pleased by his reception that he remarked to his companion, "That is the kind of talk I have been hearing everywhere except in Maine, and if that spirit has gotten down here at last, I shall be glad to do business here."

These two men are going to take an old building and try to make a living. They will employ only a very few men at first and may never have a large plant, but a large number of such small industries are worth more to the State than one large industry employing thousands of hands. The more of them we can get to come to Maine, the better for Maine. The Develop Maine Movement has had something to do with getting this little business to come and it is seeking many others. That is one of the practical services the Movement is performing for Maine.

Every man and woman in the State ought to help in this work. The first need is a large number of members. If you have not already joined, and desire to do so, send your name, address and occupation with $1 to Geo. L. Sanborn, Norway, Me., who has charge of the Movement's affairs in this section, or to V. E. Lawry, Treas., Box 374, Augusta, Maine.

MAINE APPLES FOR MAINE.

Maybe Maine people who do not raise apples can get this season native fruit that is for use. That there will be difficulty in exporting the usual volume of this product is indicated and the first quality fruit that has been sent abroad may find a market nearer home and be appreciated.

It may lead to development of sales which have lapsed in recent years, due to the superiority of the fruit shipped 3,000 miles and more, from Oregon and California, to the miserable native fruit sent to city markets.

For some unaccountable reason the Maine farmers have pursued a policy of catering to the outside market all these years and practically all the No. 1 product has gone elsewhere. That has left grades two, three, four, five, six, and seemingly in cases lower than that even, for the naturally attractive markets, near home, and prices and sure pay.

Many of the misfortunes that European nations are undergoing by reason of war seem likely to operate as American benefits. If the outcome in the one item of apple marketing can convince the Maine apple raiser that the 20 cities and 100 large towns in Maine are his markets for No. 1 fruit, honestly picked, packed and measured, it will be mutually profitable. It is high time that we saw that this is the proper way to do business.

APPLE EATER.

Maine People on Farms.

There are 305,437 persons in Maine that work for a living and 82,247 of these are employed upon the farms, according to a report which has just been issued by the United States Census Bureau. Of the persons engaged in agricultural pursuits, the bulk of them are farm operators and farm laborers. The farm operators number 46,400 and 44,282 are men and 2,118 are women. There are 24,497 farm laborers in the State and 24,146 are males and 351 are females.

There are 367 dairy farmers in the State and they employ 153 laborers and four foremen. There are also 41 persons in the State whose principal source of income is from stock raising. The number of cowboys and sheep herders in this State is 24.

In the entire United States there are 71,580,270 persons over 10 years of age and 38,167,336 or 53 per cent. of this number are engaged in gainful occupations. Of the gainfully occupied, 12,659,203 or 33 per cent. are engaged in agriculture. There are 5,864,000 farms operated in the Nation and they employ 5,975,000 laborers.

Crab Apple Jelly.

Wash the fruit, remove the scales, cut in halves or quarters to be sure the fruit is sound, but do not pare nor remove the cores. Put in into a preserving kettle, and barely cover with cold water. Let it boil, stirring frequently, and mash it as it softens. Lay a large square of cheesecloth over a bowl, and turn in the fruit. Tie the corners together, and suspend it over the bowl until all the juice has dripped through. Do not squeeze the fruit, and if you wish the jelly to be perfectly clear let the jelly stand until the next day; then pour it off carefully from the sediment.

Measure the juice, and if very sour, allow an equal measure of sugar; otherwise one-fourth less sugar will be sufficient. Put in the fruit, boil from five to 20 minutes or until it thickens around the edge. The time will vary with the amount of water in the apples; therefore watch it closely and test it frequently. Remove any scum that rises, then add the sugar. Let it boil up once, skim, and strain it into a preserving kettle, turn it into the glasses. Next day cover with paper or paraffin.

For blankets the latest brides take pleasure in embroidering in silk, immense monograms the color of the satin ribbon with the blankets are bound. The same monogram may be used which is selected for sheets and towelings and a pair of handsome blankets so bound and embroidered makes a gift which will be welcomed by any bride.

Living in Comfort Out of Doors.

Sleeping on the bare ground is one of the mistaken notions of what is necessary or desirable in the outdoor life. Few persons accustomed to the usual indoor mattresses can long endure sleeping on the bare ground without feeling ill results. Nor is it at all necessary that one should sleep thus. A folding cot is available for all but the most limited equipments. These articles afford the comfort of a finely woven wire support over which blankets are thrown, making it the desired thickness.

If on a walking trip, the best thing is a double fold of canvass well sewed lengthwise, but open at each end. It should be six feet long (as long as the user), and three feet wide. On each end poles are thrust through lengthwise, and they in turn allowed to rest in two sets of forked-top stakes, or in notches cut in two logs placed the right distance apart. This supports the canvass above the ground. On this a blanket is hung and one has a soft, flexible bed as far above the ground as he wishes to make it. In the morning, strip the canvass off and use it to wrap around the other articles.

For the man who expects to sleep much out of doors without a cover, such as tent or cabin, a sleeping bag is almost a necessity. These bags are made of fine, high grade woolen, one bag fitting within another, so that one has the same thickness on all sides. The outer bag is waterproof and comes up on all sides of the head and shoulders, making a warm, rainproof covering for the entire person. It supplies one with both tent and bed at a weight which permits its going on almost any kind of a trip. One can lie inside a sleeping bag conscious that neither rain or snow can reach him. He is in no danger of kicking off the covers and getting cold feet.

There is one disadvantage about a sleeping bag as there is generally about anything. They are made in layers from the outer waterproof up to 12 or 16 inner woolen layers or bags. After one enters the bag he cannot remove or add a bag without first getting completely out. This is not very convenient at any time and decidedly unpleasant when the weather turns cold and one wishes to put in some extra layers. Notwithstanding this one drawback a sleeping bag is an article of great comfort in all kinds of weather except the warmest, and even then it makes a soft and cozy ready bed by sleeping on the outside.

It is widely used by Arctic and northern travelers for outdoor sleeping in the coldest weather. The many layers of fine woolen render it exceedingly warm, while the outer sack protects on all sides from rain or snow.

If a permanent camp is to be established for a time, and there is no cabin or permanent house of any kind, one should by all means provide himself with a good tent. Of the many styles in use, either the wall or the Amazon tent is the best for a permanent camp. The wall tent affords plenty of inside space, has open flaps at one end, and is not difficult to erect. The Amazon tent, shaped like a "lean-to" with sloping roof, closed front dividing in the center, and an extra sheet of canvass which may be supported in front as a cover over cooking or lounging space. The same tent open on one side is well adapted to an open fire. Although seemingly quite paradoxical, it is true that a tent open on one side is the warmest. With no inside fire a tightly closed tent is little warmer than the air outside. The advantage lies in keeping off storms and wind. If one has a tent open on one side he may warm it by building a rousing log fire before it, a fire with a log or big rock back and sloping slightly toward the tent. The heat is reflected inside the tent and the canvass partly retains it, making the interior quite comfortable even in severe weather. Keep a few logs handy to throw on during the night and one will scarcely notice the cold, even if sleeping in common blankets.

With a closed tent of the Indian tepee style open in the top, a small fire may be kindled on the ground inside. But this is usually too small for much warmth. Large wood-blocked heating stove warms up a tent nicely, but one must keep constantly replenishing it. Then again its weight makes a stove of any size prohibitive on most trips. A small cooking stove burning short lengths of wood takes up little room and affords about the best solution to the heating and cooking problem. It may be placed near the flaps if in a closed tent, and the short pipe allowed to project out through the opening. Cooking is done here protected from the outside cold and storms, while a big outside fire supplies ample heat during the day. At night before turning in pull down the flaps leaving just space for the pipe, and the little stove will keep the tent comfortably warm a long time, all night if rekindled once or twice. On dry, windy nights sparks from the stove or outside fire may play the mischief with the tent. Some waterproofing mixture are also claimed to be fireproof, and it is well to give a tent a soaking in it before going on a long trip.

If a camp is to be maintained for a few weeks a fly (extra roof) and floor cloth will add much comfort. If near an old lumber camp slabs afford good ground cover, and in their absence bark will do. These things help to keep out dampness, and a tight floor cloth keeps out many creeping or crawling things which might otherwise destroy the rest of a night of a tenderfoot.

A cooking stove is indispensable if the camp is kept in one spot any time. No matter how good an outdoor cook one may be there will come days of driving rains and heavy winds when outside cooking is impossible. A stove that burns wood is best for all times and places. If the camp is always to be adjacent to some village or country store as a base of supplies, a stove burning kerosene or gasoline may be preferred. But if one must depend upon carrying with him a supply of this liquid fuel, better use the old but sure wood stove since the others are useless without their special fuel.

A cooking outfit of some kind is a necessity. Many ready-made collections of suitable utensils are offered, but one may treat it do better than buy an outfit. The chief advantage in the assorted outfits lies in their similar shape as pails, roasters, pans, cups, fry pans, and all other articles are so constructed as to "telescope" or fit one within another. The entire outfit thus occupies only a small space. A wood stove is sometimes included just the size to enclose all the other articles. Occasionally if but one or two persons are outfitting individual sets are offered which telescope so as to be readily carried even on

SEVERE RHEUMATIC PAINS DISAPPEAR

Rheumatism depends on an acid which flows in the blood, affecting the muscles and joints, producing inflammation, stiffness and pain. This acid gets into the blood through some defect in the digestive processes, and remains there because the liver, kidneys and skin are too torpid to carry it off.

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the old-time blood tonic, is very successful in the treatment of rheumatism. It acts directly, with purifying effect, on the blood, and through the blood on the liver, kidneys and skin, which it stimulates, and at the same time it improves the digestion.

Get Hood's Sarsaparilla today. Sold by all druggists.

A walking trip. Since so much depends upon each party and its use for the articles, it is best to get the advice of some one of experience and delay the purchase of a complete outfit until the experiences of one or two trips dictate what to lay for permanent use.

In making up any outfit for an outdoor trip, two rules should be kept in mind: Take nothing along for which a definite need cannot be seen. Putting in, various things that "may come handy" is adding useless weight and bulk. Shape, weight and bulk should always be considered in making up an outfit, unless the camp is within easy access to the railroad and excess baggage, freight or express charges are no moment. Sharp corners are always to be avoided if the outfit is to be transported by man or horseback or boat. Such goods, if necessary, are best wrapped inside blankets or clothing, and the whole carried inside a waterproof bag. Small packages are better adapted to carry whether by horse, man or boat. Especially are they an advantage when the boat must be unloaded and the goods carried by hand around a rough portage.

We close as we began. Do not attempt false economy in fitting out with personal wearing apparel, such as boots, shoes, the means of cooking nor good food, some food in abundance. Like an engine, the body must be well sheltered and given plenty of food (fuel) if powder is obtained.

Small Boy's Long Walk.

12-Year-Old Tramped 339 Miles With His Father in Western Maine.
"The Mountaineer" department of the Boston Transcript relates how a 12-year-old lad named Quentin accompanied his father during the summer just closed on a long walk in Western Maine, much of it in Oxford County. The father makes a practice of such trips, but it was the lad's first experience of the kind.

The little fellow was attired in a suit suggestive of the Boy Scout and carried a knapsack, a copy of that of his father. The start was from Portland, and the route ran through the Windhams, past the eastern point of Sebago to Raymond and thence to Cass on Pleasant Lake, a distance of 25 miles.

Through South Paris.
For the second day the tramp followed the length of the lake and through Otisfield to Oxford; thence to South Paris and the climb to Paris Hill, a mile more than the day before. The road along Pleasant and Thompson lakes was exceedingly picturesque, with long stretches through the woods, and delightful vistas of forest and water. The sunset showed the Presidential range clear-cut against the rosy sky, and the summer bore the prediction of a splendid day for tramping.

The morning walk of the third day showed the White Mountains slipping back into the landscape and other peaks taking their places. After leaving West Sumner there were difficulties with the roads, which showed fork after fork unmarked and perplexing. At length, by dint of questioning at a lone farmhouse well guarded by dogs, the proper route was established.

There were eight miles of it through virgin woods with only two camps—abandoned—and a sugar house in the entire distance. This road emerges from the forest at Worthley's Pond, striking the Androscoggin at East Peru, a place six miles distant in either direction from a bridge. The day's walk ended a Canton with a record of 31 miles.

For the next day there was a return down the river to Gilbertville, where there is a bridge, and then still down the river of Jay to get a road bearing north, the destination being the end of the road in the Dead River region. The route was circuitous through Wilton to Farmington, 31 miles, but on the whole, flat and uninteresting. During the next tramp some miles of State road were traversed, there being here a long stretch that is being built at one time.

Among Franklin County Mountains.
The views were particularly fine, including the Rangeley summits and Abraham, the latter being seen from base to summit. The way lay around the base of this mountain to Freeman and Kingfield, 32 miles.

The sixth day followed the Carrabasset River, a wild mountain stream, to Bigelow, where there are presented exceptionally fine prospects of Bigelow mountain.

There is here a complete loop around the mountain which the tramps took getting by evening as far as Stratton (27 miles), the following one which was rainy (11 miles) and Carrabasset was gained the next day. In the rain, camp was made during a fair portion of the day in an improvised pine shelter with a glorious fire. Kingfield was the stopping place for the night with a record of 26 miles.

This was moose and bear country, with wild birds as plenty as sparrows in the streets of Boston. For the following day, which took the tramps to Weld, the record was 32 miles, and then to Rumford Falls, with 25 miles and the experience of sleeping in a brilliantly lighted town. The eleventh day was spent on the road to Bethel, where the pedestrians were obliged to dodge automobiles.

Through Waterford and Harrison.
The twelfth day was spent in tracing out lonely roads past Songo Pond to the Waterfords and Harrison, 25 miles. The concluding tramp was along the lakes to Sebago, passing the night in a camp near the shore, where the full moon added beauties to the delightful scene.

While no records were aimed at, the 12-13 days showed a mileage of 339, which was carried out by this little 12-year-old chap easily and with pleasure and profit to himself.

The Transcript carefully avoids giving the names of the man and boy who were credited with this journey, and also suppresses the exact date of the trip. We wonder if some of the Advertiser readers did not see them and talk with them. If so, we would like to hear from such readers with more about the man and boy including their full names and their residence.

Wasn't that peace congress to be held in Vienna this month, and wasn't the Austrian premier, who signed the first declaration of war, to be honorary chairman of it? Doubtless he is eagerly waiting to welcome just such a congress for his people never had greater need of its services.

An Early Catalogue of the Norway
Liberal Institute, 1850, by A. E.
Verrill.

Among the papers left by the late Elliot Smith, now in the possession of his son, C. M. Smith, there is a catalogue of the officers and students of this school, published in 1850.

Perhaps this was the first catalogue published.
The students listed numbered 187; of these the "gentlemen" number 102; the "ladies" number 85. Out of town students number 63. Of the whole number only eleven, so far as I can learn, are still living. Those known to be still living are as follows:

be, Norway.

Foster, now of Norway.
Flora L. Smith, wife of A. E. Verrill, professor in Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

Susan B. Smith, widow of Albert Merrill of Norway and Mechanic Falls.

Very likely a few more are living, but no one that I have consulted can name others, while most are known to have died.

The trustees were as follows:—Horo-dio G. Cole, president; Elliot Smith, secretary; Eben C. Shackley, treasurer;
Ezra F. Beal, Benjamin Thayer, Jr.,
Franklin Manning, Adna C. Denison.

The Board of Instruction was as follows:—Mark H. Dunning, Thomas F.
Barton, Warren F. Barnes, Isaiah H.

The list of text books of interest.
All are now forgotten. The tuition was very moderate—Common English,
$3.00; Higher English, $4.00; Language,
$4.00; Drawing and Painting (extra),
$2.00, etc.

As to board, it states that board in families, including washing, fuel, lights,

Glenen; and $1.00 to $1.25 for ladies
per week.

Millinery Opening.
The fall and winter millinery opening at Mrs. R. L. Poyers', was held on Friday and Saturday of last week. As usual Norway ladies were interested in this affair. There were 86 trimmed hats, and they represented as many different ways of trimming, and many different shapes.

Mrs. Poyers has as milliners this season, besides herself, Mary Adams and Lillian Poyers.

There is a wide range of styles.
Something to please everyone. The hats are either small or large.

The turbans are built high and trimmed high and are very good, while the large hats are very flat, both in make and trimming. Tricorneer military turbans, toques, sailor shapes, Glangary, the Scottish turbans, Cassock hats with high crowns, are some of the new shapes.

In trimming, large and rather flat full blown roses used singly or in wreaths,
made of metallic roses and silk are combined; also in kid. Fancy feathers, small tips, gold and silver flowers and foliage, fancy stick-ups and metallic ornaments and wings. Ribbon still holds good.

In materials black leads then comes black and white, myrtle, navy, Corbeau, tete-de-negre, Nattier and some of the paler shades worked in the trimming.

To Rejoin the British Army.

The Saturday Argus says: Two members of the National Guard of the State of Maine will be on the way next week,
to join British regiment and participate in the fighting in Europe. One is Capt. Alton E. Whitehead, commanding officer of Co. D, Norway, and the other is First Sergt. Fleming of that company. The two are now attending the State school here.

Capt. Whitehead, who has been in command of Co. D for two years, was formerly a member of the British marines in the Plymouth division. He left with the rank of corporal. In compliance to his orders to report for duty,
he will leave Boston on the Franconia within a few days. He has not yet severed his connection with the Maine guard and will not do so unless it is positively necessary.

A week ago he was called to Canada and was at that time offered a birth as paymaster-sergeant with the Grenadier Guards. He did not want to take the offer at that time and the opportunity has now passed.

First Sergt. Fleming is what might be termed as a veteran in service. He fought in the Boer war and in an India campaign where he was wounded. When he went into the reserves, after several years of service in the regular army, he rank of sergeant in the First Battalion of the Irish Guards and this rank is promised him when he returns. He will go today to Canada.

Fleming leaves a wife and three children at home, but the British government will see to their needs.

Capt. Whitehead is an efficient officer, well liked. He is striking in appearance, being of sturdy carriage and alert. The leaving of these two men means much to the Maine guard and the best wishes accompany their going.

Mrs. Fred Moore and Mr. and Mrs.
H. Walter Brown were at Gilead, Sunday afternoon, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Samuel A. Moore.

Mildred Chapman, who is teaching at Greenwood City, was the guest of Mrs.
R. O. Porter, Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Danforth go to Stockbridge, Mass., Friday, to attend the wedding of their niece, Ruth Tenney.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eastman, who have been the guests of her sister, Mrs. J. W.
Nash, returned to their home in Kearsarge,
N. H., Tuesday.

Edna Noyes, superintendent of the Candle Ball of the Methodist church, assisted by Mrs. A. F. Bennett, recently entertained the mothers and children at the vestry of the Methodist church. A pleasing program was given, followed by light refreshments.

Mrs. Geo. D. Swift has just returned from the city, where she has been studying the new designs in millinery.

Testifies She Was Restored
to Health by Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lackawanna, N. Y.—"After my first child was born I felt very miserable and could not stand on my feet. My sister-in-law wished me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and my nerves became firm,
appetite good, step elastic, and I lost
that weak, tired feeling. That was six years ago and I have had three fine healthy children since. For female troubles I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it works like a charm. I do all my own work."—Mrs.
A. F. KREMER, 1574 Electric Avenue,
Lackawanna, N. Y.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down
feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard remedy for female ills.

Women who suffer from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should be convinced of the ability of Lydia E.
Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health by the many genuine and truthful testimonials we are constantly publishing in the newspapers.

Allister was helping his son Eugene pick away the corn fodder. He went to pitch a fork full to the barn window when he for some time. He was very lame, but got around and worked a little until about a year ago, when he had a shock, since which time he has failed gradually.

He leaves a wife, six children, a mother,
two brothers and four sisters.

Mr. and Mrs. Loring McKee have gone to Auburn for the winter.

EAST PARIS.

"This way for the Fair Grounds" at North Buckfield, Friday, Oct. 2.

The farmers are rushing their sweet corn to the factory. The corn is very good.

Snow, rain and hail (Monday, Sept.
28). No sleighing, though, and no frost except a little Tuesday morning.

C. H. Cobb remains very poorly, but sits part of the time and rides out once in a while, pleasant days.

Mrs. F. L. Millett and family have closed their summer home here and gone back to Norway, Mass.

Plenty of cider apples in this vicinity and only 20 cents a hundred pounds at the station. Small pay for picking and hauling and nothing for the apples.
Somebody else gets the profit.

Our roads are in bad condition and every rain makes them worse. Ditches in the middle of corn and bean fields
"slice ways" to turn the water out even where there is a ditch at the side.

The soil and the Bank are strong factors of success in this community. The soil is the means of bringing the world's money to us, and the Bank offers the best way of taking care of that money and making it do the most good.

Use "Gets-It," Corns Shrivel, Vanish!

It's the New Way, and You'll Forget You Ever Had Corns.

"2 drops put on in 2 seconds, corn shrivels, comes clean off!" That's the marvelous story of "GETS-IT," the new-plant corn cure. Nothing can be simpler for the cure of corns—and it

No Corns to Bump!
No Pain, If
You Use
"GETS-IT."

never fails. That's why millions of people are using "GETS-IT" today and throwing away their fussy plasters, sticky tape, toe-catching salves, and "wrapping outfits" that make a bundle around the toe and choke it into pain by pressing either on or around the corn. There is nothing to stick to your stocking, nothing to cause inflammation or rawness, nothing to press on or around the corn. You apply it in 2 seconds. No more knives, razors, scissors or files with their blood-poison dangers. Try "GETS-IT" for that corn, callus, wart or bunion. "GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

NORTH BUCKFIELD.

Holmes--Swallow.

A very pretty wedding occurred at the residence of Mrs. Isabel Swallow, Monday, when her only daughter, Lola Belle, was united in marriage to Carl Mason Holmes. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. A. Knickerbocker of Arlington, Mass., the double ring service being used. They were unattended. Lillian Holmes, a sister of the groom, played the wedding march. Only members of the immediate families were present.

The bride was tastefully dressed in a gown of white satin messaline with shadow lace trimmings and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. The house was made attractive with cut flowers and evergreen. There were many presents, including silver, linen, old ivory and china and a generous sum of money.

Mrs. Holmes is a graduate of the Buckfield High school, 1910, and has been a successful teacher in her home town, and by her cheerful disposition and pleasing manner has won many friends. Mr. Holmes is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Holmes, the leader of the popular Holmes orchestra, and a successful farmer. Both are highly esteemed and have the best wishes of a host of friends. After a few days' visit with relatives in Massachusetts, the happy couple will reside with the bride's mother.

Friday, the members of Mountain Grange gave the bride a variety shower. Both young people are officers in the Grange at the present time. The presents were many and varied. There was a social dance and intermission ice cream and cake were served.
